

Meet Terry Doyle

If you are reading this, you probably accessed it through my friends at The Institute for Advancements in Mental Health (IAM).

Welcome to my workshop. My name is Terry Doyle, and one of my passions is woodworking. I love to spend time in my workshop creating things.

I have been involved with IAM for a few years, mostly in relation to their charity golf tournament, Hole Out For Hope. Initially, I participated on the board for the tournament, and I donated some of my crafts to the silent auction, but I want to do more. If you are a hobbyist like me, you will understand we do it because we love to. I refer to it as a labour of love. It is this labour of love and my commitment to supporting IAM in a more impactful way that drove me to this idea.

I developed a catalogue of projects I built that might be of interest to others. The concept is to donate net proceeds from these projects to IAM.

All materials costs would be quoted based on current prices at the time of purchase and a full detailed invoice to support.

My hope is that you will find something you like from the catalogue, and I can begin my quest.

Thank-you
Terry Doyle
